ACCIDENTAL DROWNING.

Thompsonville, July 6—The body of James McHâle, 20, assistant paymaster of the Bigelow Hartford Carpet corporation, was found floating in the Connecticut river this forenoon near the old Endeld to Bridge, McHâle left his home last night, saying he would be back in half an hour for supper. He took his hunting dog with him and the dog also disappeared. It is supposed that McHale was attempting to bathe the dog in the river and fell into the deep water where both he and the dogs were drowned. McHale was active locally, being a prominent athlete. Medical Examiner Alcorn gave a verdict of accidental drowning.

COURT DEFINES FIVE ESSENTIALS OF COURTSHIP

London, July 5.—Five essentials of courtship were laid down by counsel in Mr. Justice Lushs court.

Mr. S. J. P. Merlin was addressing the jury for Mr. William Cuthbert.

In the correspondence, counsel pointed out, there was nothing even approaching what was usually called a love letter, and not a single letter which contained a stronger term than "Yours very sincerely."

There was no engagement ring and the young man took the widow to no theatres—not even to a picture theatre. There were five essentials in the conduct of engaged persons to each other which here were totally absent. Mr. Merilin gave the first.
